AG. CLUB FAIR
IN FULL SWAY
BARNWARMING TOMORROW

Ninth Annual Agricultural Exposition is One of Best—Two One-Act Plays Tonight.

Today and tomorrow will be given over to the Ag. Club Fair and "The Barn Warning." The ninth annual fair and agricultural exposition officially opens at 12 o'clock noon today and continues to noon tomorrow with the barnwarming coming tomorrow evening. From the increasing interest by both faculty and students, this year promises to be the most successful fair ever held by the Ag. Club. The large committee has been working for several weeks on the plans, and everything planned will take place according to schedule. This afternoon the student judging contest will take place, and in the evening there will be two plays by the dramatic club. The departmental exhibits and demonstrations will be open all afternoon and evening. Refreshments will be on sale by the Cads until closing time. Admission to the fair and entertainment Friday night is thirty-five cents.

The Student Judging Contest

This student judging contest will start at ten o'clock today and will be going on in some of the various departments until after four o'clock this afternoon. All students are invited and urged to take part. A bronze medal with the name of the winner engraved on the back will be given to the highest scorer in each department. Freshmen as well as others are eligible. Mr. Milton Danziger, assistant manager Eastern States Exhibition will be present Friday night at the play and will present the medals to the winners at this time. He will also present the trophy for the Dairy Products Judging Team which was won by the C. A. C. team at the Eastern States this fall.

The judging contest will be held as follows:

10 a.m., Dairy Cattle, Dairy Barn
11 a.m., Animal Husbandry, Horse Barn, Shrop Barn, Piggery
1 p.m., Poultry, Armory
2 p.m., Crops, Armory
3 p.m., Horticulture, Armory
4 p.m., Dairy Products, Dairy Laboratory

GAMOUS BOARD
HOLDS ELECTIONS

New Constitution Also Adopted—Kane Chosen News Editor

Edward K. Kane, '26, was elected to the board of News Editors, and Philip J. Wadhams, '29, was chosen a member of the Associate News Board at the last meeting of The Campus Board.

At the same time a new constitution was presented and adopted by the paper. This constitution provides for an Executive Council composed of the Editor, Associate Editor, Managing Editor, Business Manager, and Assistant Business Manager. It also states that the Business Manager shall be a Junior, thus allowing him to complete his duties before the end of his Senior year. The new constitution also has provisions regarding membership which is based upon promptness and ability in covering assignments. Any candidate is recommended for the Board, after having had five columns of news printed. A clause in the constitution states that members of the board shall be dismissed when they consistently fail to respond to assignments or meetings of the board.

MRS. ORPHA J. STEVENS DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Orpha J. Stevens, wife of Professor Alva T. Stevens, died early Sunday morning at her home in Whitney Hall. Mrs. Stevens died from a complication of diseases and had been ill since her return from Michigan last summer.

Funeral services were held at one o'clock last Tuesday, Dr. H. A. Seekson officiating. Following the service the body was taken to Mrs. Stevens' home in Williamson, Michigan, for burial.

Mrs. Stevens was loved by all at Storrs. Her love and interest in the college and those that help to carry on her work was manifested from the time she came to Storrs with Mr. W. S. Stevens nineteen years ago. Dr. Seekson in his remarks paid a very high tribute to her character, friendship and work in the community.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Stevens is survived by a daughter Helen, and a brother and father in Michigan. Burial services were held from her home in Williamson at 2:30 o'clock last Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Stevens will be missed by all, and the sympathy of the community goes to her family during their bereavement.

Only Connecticut Man Selected For Springfield Union's Mythical Team; Six Colleges Represented on First Team.

Oscar Nanfeldt, Connecticut's husky tackle on the 1925 eleven, is the only man from Connecticut picked for the all-star team selected by the Springfield Union. He is also the only man in this state to be so honored, Trinity and Wesleyan failing to have a man placed on either the first or second mythical teams. The selection of Nanfeldt will please the followers of the Aggie team during the past season, as the big boy proved his value in the line in every game in which he participated.

In selecting its all-star team, The Union states:

"The smaller colleges considered for this mythical eleven are Middlebury, Norwich and Vermont in the backs. Rice of Norwich as another and Weylcyan failing to have a man one whit better than Dick Converse, although good, was rather eclipsed by that of Mohardt as one of the half-backs. Rice of Norwich as another and the sturdy Joe Hildray of Mass. Aggies completing this backfield."

ed and much discussion arises. The next scene is one in which the police are drawn into the case and DeLevis heaps coals of fire upon Dancy’s head.

The very atmosphere in the next act was charged with tension. Nanfeldt played his part well which injected a little comedy into the play. The scene between Dancy and his wife was a very confidential one in which loyalty to one’s wife is strongly emphasized. From then on the action is fast. A doddering and conscientious grocer paves the way for Dancy’s downfall. DeLevis wins his point and withdraws. Dancy confuses all to his wife. The inspector arrives just a moment too late to prevent the suicide of Dancy and the play is brought to a tragic end.

As a whole the play was exception-al and properly done. A more natural interpretation could not be desired. The prospects for future presentations are exceedingly bright.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the play was the fine acting of Billy. He was ably supported by Titely, Guth- chell, Sullivan, Moore and Miss Hut- ten. The remainder also did fine work.

The cast which so ably produced the play are as follows:

Charles Winsor, Owner of Meldon Court, Newmarket
Lady Adela, His wife Miss Ellis Ferdinand DeLevis, Young, rich and new
Mr. Billip
Tricresse, Winsor’s butler
General Canynge, A racing oracle

Business Manager Mr. Hodge
Electrician Mr. Doolittle
Property Manager Mr. Wheeler
Stage Manager Miss Service
Stage Assistants: Miss Foley, Mr. Samu, Mr. Kendrick.

The regular monthly meeting of the Montieth Arts Society was held at Holcomb Hall Wednesday evening, December 2. The entertainment consisted of a musical program presented by members of the club.

The program, announced by Miss Betty Healey, consisted of:
1. Violin solos by Miss Julia Sklarsky, accompanied by Miss Rena Cohen.
   a. “Sarat“and,” Carl Bohn
   b. “Andante Cantabile,” Tebarks-fray.
2. Talk on negro music by Miss Kay Welch.
   a. Piano selections by Miss Cohen Miss Welch introduced Miss Everanged several entertainments to be

CHING” HAMMILL

To the faculty, upper classmen, and friends of James “Ching” Hammill, who knew him when he was racing a pigskin up and down Gardner Dow Field for Connecticut, the news of his death last Wednesday morning, came as a slow blow. “Ching” always held a warm place in the hearts of his friends, not only for his athletic prowess, but also for his personal traits.

When “Ching” left Connecticut before his college work was completed, he took with him the sincere admiration of all. This admiration has steadily grown on the outside where it has been an unqualified success both in the professional and business world.

The sympathy of the faculty, students, friends and admirers goes to his wife and parents in their bereavement.

FREE SPEECH!

The address of Mr. Roger Baldwin, exponent of “free speech,” and a professional radical, fell on college assembly last Wednesday like a bomb shell. Its falling did much damage and for once we conserve Nutmegs actually got hot around the collar in either expressing our condemnation or acceptance of the speaker’s views.

It is well that such a speaker as Mr. Baldwin can be secured to speak to the assembly once a year. We would not easily advocate his reappearance more than once annually for fear that he might provoke an inclination of the student body to break away from this worldly regiment of “Little Babbitas,” in which the speak or practically put us in. In fact there might even be several blank spaces in the Campus given over to the faculty as reserved by them to hold our views on various college subjects in the presence of the many kindnesses and extended sympathies in the public schools, he continued.

In closing, he said,

The arrival of the Student Senate at 6:10 caused a bit of a stir among the waiting freshmen, who, a few minutes later, started their fire. There beneath a cloudy, star-dellied sky over a strongly guarded and concealed fire, a sixty pound pork roast to the accompaniment of the guarded whisperings of its anxious classmates. The required hour seemed to the freshman, senator, and upper classmen, the latter showing more initiative than the sophomores, had found the place and shared the thrill of suspense. An approximate count by the senate showed that there were more than the required number present, for the president Maurice McLaughlin, counting as twenty percent of the class, had assured his attendance at the Roast. A shout of victory followed the congratulations extended by President Lewis of the Student Senate to McLaughlin, under whose leadership the jubilant class marched to Holcomb Hall with the pig. Here were held demonstrations of joy in the form of cheers, and congratulations, expiations and condemnation of the poor who at no time even threatened to disturb the smooth course of what was without doubt an overwhelming victory for the freshmen.

The remainder of the evening was spent at the victory dance held in the Armory under the auspices of the winning class.

The event shows plainly the benefit of cooperation and organization which the freshmen certainly have and which the sophomores plainly lack even at this stage of their association with each other. The spirit shown by the younger class speaks well for the future of the College, when the burdens of leadership fall on their shoulders.

with the accepted policy of the institution or of giving up their positions,” said Mr. Baldwin. The much discussed Tennessee Law on Evolution is only one of eight of its kind which prohibit the teaching of certain theories in the public schools, he continued.

“A academic freedom spells democracy,” said the speaker, “and we have got to go back to the old policy of giving and take of opinions.” He showed how in one state the legislators had gone so far as to compel Bible reading. This, he felt, did nothing more than to produce a regiment of “Little Babbitas,” and like any other political regulation of academic education, is a narrow menace to a college. Every college, he said, should at least have the privilege of regulating its own business.

In order to have a world for the many, and by the many, the speaker showed that it was necessary for each to do more than just his little private bit, to get more than just his little pile.

In closing, he said, “We must be advocates of freedom of opinion and of tolerance, which we have forgotten in these years of stress.”

All the world’s a stage and all the numerous doctors merely usher about.

Too Much Teaching and Not Enough Learning Delegates Are Told.—Shorter Football Schedules Advocated.

Twentysix colleges and universities were represented at an Intercollegiate Parley on American College Education held at Wesleyan University last Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Winthrop Tilley and John L. Breitweiser '27 were the representatives from Connecticut.

Dr. Meiklejohn

The Parley opened Friday evening in Fayerweather Gymnasium with an address by Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn on the College of the Future. Essentially, his address was a plan by which the students of the future, or what should be studied.

Rather, as soon as possible, should decided the teaching of a great many subjects are considered, he simply referred his statement that, to his judgment, the college professor is broad-minded.

After the main address, Dr. Meiklejohn announced himself as ready to answer any questions or to defend his views.

SAFETY VALVE

To the Editor:
As we go about the campus we hear conversations on all sorts of things—activities, classes, pros, courses, games, co-eds, quizzes, and occasionally we hear the library mentioned.

The attitude of the students toward the place in the Main Building set aside as the library seems to be one of indifference, a place to stay as far away from as possible. For instance, you are given an outside reference in history. You have a sneaky suspicion that, perhaps, the instructor won’t call on you—immediately you forget the assignment. To such a person the library of course has no value. It is like a disease; something to be safely avoided. How often one hears a freshman or even an upperclassman boast, “I haven’t been inside the library since I’ve been here,” or, “I’ve only been to the library once or twice this year.” Isn’t learning to use a library part of one’s college education? Look at the library in that light for a moment consider an outside assignment something worth doing, something of value. Learn to use the library.

Put yourself in the place of a student who is greatly interested in following up a subject in which he is vitally interested. There really is a surprising number of these people. Such a student finds a pursuit of certain lines impossible due to a lack of sufficient reference books.

Most of our professors and instructors decry the small number of books which are available for outside work. Each one feels that his course is more or less handicapped by the inadequateness of our library. The English Department in particular expresses such an opinion frequently.

Stop for a moment and think of the library. Is it not a disgracefully small one for a college? A state college at that! Probably the high school you graduated from has as many books as are on the shelves of C. A. C.’s library. Again think of the library: this time in regard to its location. It is central, but is it isolated enough to be quiet? If you think so, sit there some morning at seven-thirty there ten minutes of ten or some afternoon at three-thirty. One is reminded of Kipling’s: “Boots, Boots, Up and Down again.”

Again I ask you to call to your mind pictures of the library as you have seen it at various times during the day. Have you ever been there at six o’clock at night? A visitor from the campus looking through the door at this time, would hold up his hands in horror if he were told, “This is our library.” The appearance of the library at this hour is certainly not encouraging to study. It resembles a waiting room in a small station. Many newspapers are strewn about. There is much chatter and laughter, and a great deal of moving in and out. It may even be the scene of a short but very wet water battle.

Compare your impression of the College Library with that of other libraries with which you are familiar. Can you honestly say that you are proud of the room in the south end of the Main Building?

We saw the Church Community House campaign begin. It grew. It reached its goal. Its cornerstone was laid. Who made this campaign successful? The students, the alumni, and the faculty with the help of the citizens of the state. Wouldn’t a somewhat similar campaign in the interest of our college library be just as successful? Wouldn’t you be willing to help? Think it over.—S. C. ’27

ACTIVITIES DISCUSSED BY CO-ED A. A. COUNCIL

At a regular meeting of the Girls A. A. Council held on Wednesday evening, December 2, at Holcomb Hall, final reports of the fall sports were given, and plans for the winter and spring athletic activities were discussed.

To date the Sophomores have been the most successful, having made four points toward winning the cup as compared to two by the Juniors and two by the Freshmen.

Training rules for Basketball candlelight were also discussed. Mr. Guy urged the girls who are to play to be careful to keep training during the season.

The big feature of the barnstorming is that it is to be a costume dance. The committee reserves the right of excluding anyone not in old clothes or in costume. The prices of tickets are gentlemen, fifty-five cents; ladies, thirty-five cents; and spectators, twenty-five cents.

The picture of two seasons ago will be resumed again this year, and it is expected that a large number of girls will come out for practice.

one in the gathering was successful in asking him a question that he was unable to answer satisfactorily.

 Favor Intelligence Tests

The Saturday session was opened by an informal address by Dr. Ben D.
Wood on marking systems and admission standards for college students.
This talk served to start a round table discussion on these two subjects, and resulted in the expressing of some very worthwhile and interesting ideas, among which was a recommendation that college students be selected by intelligence tests when they are about in the fourth grade, and should then be treated differently from those who are not really capable of doing college work.
It was brought out that there are millions of dollars wasted annually on those who are dismissed from colleges at the end of their freshman year due to failure, which expense could be cut down considerably by being more careful of who enter the institutions.

Junior College Advocated

The program continued with a formal address entitled "The New Univitize," given by F. J. Goodnew, pre-resident of Johns Hopkins University. He explained at the beginning of his talk that the title was misleading in that he did not aim to be prophetic, but rather to trace the development of the universities in the Uni-ited States. He sketched the various stages through which the American institutions passed, beginning with the influence of the English Universities under which those of this country necessarily started, down to the present time when a good deal of attention is given to specialization. As for the future, he expressed the belief that the Junior Colleges which are springing up were going to prove of great benefit because they would better prepare a student in the fundamental, and enable him to pursue specialized studies sooner and to better advantage.

Saturday afternoon there was again held a round table discussion led by Dr. Wood, who presented the problem of examinations, what they show, and how they could be improved. A good deal may be expected from the new forms of examinations such as the fill-in, and right or wrong quizzes.
Dr. Wood expressed the belief that examinations should not be given more than twice a year, and that there is really no need for degrees or honors to be given as a result of these examinations.

Too Much Teaching

Saturday evening Dr. James Har-voy Robinson led a round table discussion on "What Is Learning and How Does It Happen?" Mr. Robinson talks in a delightfully informal and human way, his seriousness interspersed with many examples of dry wit and humor. The chief theory which he proposed was that every person possesses a reverie which con-sts of those things about which that person thinks, and that that reverie is learned until it has found a place in this reverie. This led to a distinction between teaching and learning, the former being merely a method and the latter being the addition of material to the memory. One of the chief troubles with the colleges is that there is not too much teaching and not enough learning. This discussion was sus-tended and continued for two hours on Sunday morning in the same interest-vein.

Intercollegiate Athletics Discussed

Sunday afternoon saw the final round table of the Parley, when the debates discussed the problem of intercollegiate athletics. A number of resolutions were drawn up and a mem-er from each delegation was asked to vote favorably or unfavorably as their adoption. The recommendations received the approval of the attending and a system of publicity given by F. J. Goodnew, bod d of the various colleges, discussed and if possible, action taken on them. It should be understood that these motions are nothing official and do not bind anyone to anything, but are merely the expression of the fact that there are evils connected with college athletics and that there are ways of eliminating these evils. The text of the resolution follows:

"This Parley was called for undergraduate consideration of how the purpose of the American college can best be furthered, granted that the purpose is primarily the training of the mind.

"Very subordinate to this purpose is athletics. All intercollegiate athletics were incidental in their origin and should have remained so in their growth. We believe in them; because they encourage friendship between colleges and foster unity within intstitutions. But one sport, football, has taken such a hold on undergraduates, alumni and the public that its importance over the courses of the play-ging season looms larger than any other aspect of the college, especially over the primary aspect-intellectual thinking.

"We believe that the situation would be obviated largely by the colleges scheduling only four games each season, each game with a team in its own class and in its own vicinity.

"The reasons which lead us to this conclusion are:

1. Schedules of only four games would rend.r impossible the present

COLLEGE OF FUTURE
TO BE MORE FREE

annual elimination contests among the teams of the country, and consequently would render impossible the choice of mythical national and even sectional champions. Many teams would remain undefeated instead of a few.

2. With this aspect removed, less publicity would be given the game by the press and the public imagination would not be whetted so that the fever of interest would be forced up within undergraduate bodies.

3. The necessity for spring and early season training would be done away with, since the four games would be played on successive weekends beginning late in October. Practice, as at present, could start two or three weeks before the first game.

4. The crescendos of interest, at present, extending over eight games would be limited to four games; and so the large percentage of attention given football now would be lessened by the cutting down of the length of the season.

5. Colleges playing teams only in their own class and vicinity would minimize the commercial aspect of schedule making; and no small college teams would be called upon to sacrifice their own class and vicinity to make money for their institutions—as at present. This altruistic motive given for these teams would be playing undergraduates and not coaches playing undergraduates and not coaches playing coaches."

During the Parley, the delegates were the guests of the various fraternities and were well taken care of, and given an excellent impression of Wesleyan and the spirit of her students. Too much credit cannot be given to those in charge of arrangements and those who were hosts during the Parley.

Why do they call them Glee Clubs? Because it's funny how some of the girls get in,
