Through integrating different forms of media, the creator is able to give their audience a unique, multi-sensory experience. In my honors thesis, I concentrated on combining sight and sound as a communication tool and to further engage the observer.

The first type of media I chose to include was original solo instrument, voice, and piano songbooks focusing on lyrical playing for student and amateur musicians. I have also created audio realizations of the songs through Finale, which I then organized into CDs with the intention that the musician could understand how the music sounds before practicing. I combined the visual notated music and audio files along with my original artwork covers to create a package that would both appeal to the audience and convey my character. The books for solo piano include La Fleur de L’amour, Les Couleurs, Paix, Sommeil, Tranquillité, and The World, Our Salad Bar. The book Emotions is a collection for solo cello. The books Harmonia and Travels are for a solo instrument accompanied by piano. The book Lieder for Children is a collection of songs for a solo vocalist accompanied by various instruments. And lastly, the book Zodiac is a collection for solo harp.

The second type of media I chose to incorporate is five slideshows of my artwork accompanied by five of my original compositions. In choosing both the artwork and the compositions to include, I wished to portray a glimpse into my artistic development from the beginning of college (and in some cases middle and high school) through my current state. The first song, “New Beginnings”, is a composition for orchestra that I wrote during my freshman year of college. The artwork that accompanies it includes drawings I also created during this time period. The second song, “Silver Lining”, is a piece for orchestra I wrote during the fall semester of my senior year in college. The drawings that accompany it follow chronologically from the drawings used in the first song. Even though the composition is out of order chronologically, I thought that this song characterized the uncertainty I felt during this period when I did not know if I wished to major in engineering, a liberal art, or music. The third song, “Stardrops”, is a piece for flute, harp, and marimba I wrote during spring semester junior year. The drawings that accompany it also follow chronologically and were done at roughly the same time. This section for me represents the “coming into my own” section of my life where I had started to discover who I was and that I wanted to devote my life to creation of some form.

The fourth song, “Streets of Venice”, is a piece for woodwind quintet I wrote around the time I studied abroad in Florence, Italy for three weeks in 2009. The artwork that accompanies it includes pictures from the Italian trip as well as pictures from several other important places to me. The fifth and final song, “Rues de la Ville”, is a composition I wrote during the spring semester of my junior year for SATB chorus, bass flute, conga drums, and bass drums. The artwork that accompanies it consists of digital drawings. I thought this would be the appropriate piece to finish this section, because the music is comprised of a lighter, less serious aesthetic. The artwork includes Microsoft Publisher drawings I completed in middle and high school and ends with Photoshop and digital drawings I completed in college, showing how I have evolved and am still growing as an individual.

The third type of media I challenged myself to include was five movies accompanied by five of my original compositions. After much searching on the Internet, I realized my first question to myself should be “what message do I wish to convey?” I remembered that I had stumbled upon several videos from NASA\(^1\) a few months back that would be perfect to include. I have always been interested in astronomy, and by combining these two seemingly unrelated interests, I could connect the arts and sciences together, showing my audience not only who I am as a person, but also that no matter what field you choose to pursue, you can always integrate your other interests with it. After searching through my various compositions, I chose five musical works that I thought would embody and enhance the essences of the NASA video clips I had chosen.

The first NASA videos I had grouped together are scenes of the birth of the universe, the space shuttle taking off, and a satellite orbiting the earth to begin our journey of the cosmos. From the beginning, I knew my goal was to bring the audience on a journey of distance, of depth, and most importantly, of hope. I chose the composition “Sahara’s Secret” for brass quintet to accompany this group, because the wide spacing of the chords and driving middle section characterize the great unknown that is the universe as well as the excitement that comes with exploring a new frontier.

The second group of NASA videos consists of two animations. The first is a satellite redirecting an asteroid away from earth and the second is a moon landing. I chose the composition “Élan” for celesta, marimba, chimes, and synthesizer to accompany this group, because of the unusual combination of instruments. To me, the marimba stands for humanity’s footprint, the chimes embody the merciless hand of time counting down the hours of existence, the celesta represents the twinkling stars in the sky, and the synthesizer represents the unknown that lies between the known.

The third group of NASA videos focuses primarily on exploring Mars with some footage of Saturn’s moons. I chose the composition “Nature’s Movie” for orchestra to accompany these videos, because the use of strings provides an emotional connection to our sibling planets. Also, the use of the orchestra gives this piece a power and strength of many people working together for a common purpose, which is reflected in the effort put forth in the exploration of unknown worlds.

The fourth group of NASA videos utilizes various animations that deal with abstract, deep space scenarios. I chose the composition “Neonates” for woodwind quintet to accompany these movies, because the playful nature of the music highlights how all of nature mirrors the constant cycle of death and rebirth. There is also a hint of hope in demonstrating that even the great planets and stars die, but from the ashes is reborn a new tomorrow.

The fifth and final group of NASA videos is composed of several parts. The beginning provides a recapitulation of the journey we have taken throughout this collection of videos. The middle includes animations of satellites rotating the earth, symbolizing how no matter how far we roam, we will always need to come back and take care of our home. The ending is an animation of zooming out to the edge of the universe from our little planet Earth past all of the stars and galaxies. For this last section, I have also included quotes about humanity to further illustrate how small we are in the grand scheme of things but also how significant we can be. I chose the composition “Diluvia” for strings to accompany this final movie, because the simple melody along with the mostly homophonic accompaniment characterize what I am trying to communicate in these videos about the unification of humanity. We share this amazing gift of life with every human being on the planet and yet there are still wars, poverty, and greed. This is my cry for peace in the only language I know everyone can understand to end the needless suffering. Instead of using violence and endless bloodshed to advance our civilization forward, it is time we grow up as a species. Although the shuttle has been cancelled and with that comes new unknowns, I hope that this will only provide a new opportunity for us to have hope and use space exploration as the vessel that develops humanity into all that I know we can be. We can make a difference by being cognizant of the wonderful existence we have been granted. It starts with each individual person and it ends with a better world.

I have never really known “what I want to be when I grow up”. In fact, I am constantly changing and may never know. However, through integrating these various forms of media and incorporating my different interests in music, art, and astronomy, it has taught me that I do not have to necessarily choose. As long as I keep my options open, I can instead use everything I learn and apply it to different areas of my life. This has been a great exercise in composing for different types of media and it has shown me where I have come from musically and artistically and where I am now. I do not know where life will take me, but I only wish it will let me inspire others to take this wonderful gift and follow their dreams fiercely and without hesitation.

The stars wink on almost ev’ry night, sing it’ high their sweet lullaby.
The moon says, "shh, let the children sleep. This is the time for the dreaming kind."

My Ma’ma’d say ‘fore she’d tuck me in, "You’re a good kid, hun. You’re my number one."
On the forehead she’d plant a kiss, humming as night had been sung.

Aim high for your dreams. Don’t let them get away. With every bridge you cross, I’ll be

Andante cantabile \( \frac{\text{J}}{\text{=} 86} \)

Voice

Acoustic Guitar

She stands behind a tree bark, her skin so pearly and stark.

Long blonde waves run down her spine and violet, her eyes peer into mine.

Frail, frail boy leans against her knee, his body tender and happiness not free.

Mirrored reflections across each other. They beckon on to come under.

Lost, lost in an exotic place. I've wandered a way in the forest's manner.

Lost, lost in an exotic place. Every whisper is a stranger.
I opened my mouth to ask a question, but a finger on my lips was my rejection. She sang, “Before you leave, remember this line. Not every thing that is treasure will shine.”

No. 5) Valley of Sin
Lieder for Children

Moderato \( \frac{3}{4} = 80 \)

Wind whistles through branches, moonlight floods the coast. Life less eyes and care less lies peer out of skulls of ghosts.

Night time is falling; the path is dim. I'm wandering alone in a valley of sin.

©2010 Bethany Ciullo
The ground shakes me from my feet, the earth quake spreads spiders. Broken tree limbs are two headed tigers.

Night time is falling; the path is dim. I'm wandering a lone in a valley of sin.

I pray to the wild for help with these things. And a fiery serpent points from the ring.
No. 6) No More Roses

Earth’s jewels are lost at such a great cost. No more roses will bloom in nature’s tomb.

Life has been burned to the ground. Ghosts of the wilderness stream down. The good Mother’s tears fall around. Life has been burned to the ground.

Scenes of slaughter open valleys where none should be. The young woman and boy now mysteries.
